

Universal Calendar Problem Statement

Problem Statement:

Although there are many schedules for individual events and websites, there isn't a single source university calendar listing all important dates and information, for each student year, sporting events and on-campus activities.

Who is experiencing the problem?

Faculty, students & their family, and all the Gamecock community who want to be involved in campus events.

What is the problem?

People of the gamecock community must scour the plethora of campus websites, and cross-reference event dates to understand and realize what events are going on around campus.

Where does the problem present itself?

The problem lays with the mass distribution of calendars and schedules across a multitude of universities websites. The academic and sporting event schedules, just to name a few, are both hosted on different sites, making it a headache to know when breaks or academic deadlines are in conjunction with home football games, or other community organized events.

Why does it matter?

Having a streamlined calendar for the university encourages more people to get involved in its community. Additionally, it shines a light on more obscure community events otherwise difficult to find and join. Benefiting, both students and the Gamecock community.
